URGES FARMERS TO HOARD WHEAT AND SAVE THE MARKET

Official of Farm Bureau Federation Puts Plan Up to the President

SEEK FEDERAL SANCTION OF PLAN TO WAREHOUSE GRAIN

Predicts Doubling of Prices of Wheat Under Proposed Program

WASHINGTON.—President Harding and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace Monday were urged by Gray Silver, Washington representative of the American Farm Bureau federation, to sanction the warehousing on the farms of a minimum of 200,000,000 bushels of wheat as a means of avoiding putting on the market an excessive surplus. With a program of this sort, which Mr. Silver says, can be accomplished with the aid of the new warehousing and intermediate credits act, he predicts that the price of wheat can be doubled.

FIFTY-SIXTH SESSION OF LEGISLATURE NOTED FOR WHAT IT FAILED TO DO

Expectations at Opening of Session Not Fulfilled; Assembly Blames Senate for Failure to Enact Proposed Measures Into Law

MADISON, Wis.—By the Associated Press.—The fifty-sixth session of Wisconsin's legislature, which has about ended, will be remembered, legislators say, for the things it has not done, rather than for its accomplishments.

When the houses convened six months ago, both of them organized and controlled by the La Follette progressive republican-socialist coalition, the state expected sweeping changes in taxation, labor legislation, highway financing, education and prohibition enforcement. The republican and socialist platforms promised radical departures from existing laws on these subjects.

Results show that legislation has been negative in its effect, instead of establishing important innovations. Before they left Madison assemblymen generally were asserting that it had taken them six months to do almost nothing, due to senate unwillingness to concur in assembly actions.

Taxes, the major problem of the present session, remain almost as before the legislature convened. The secrecy clause has been repealed, Governor Blaine has a bill establishing a $500 exemption on homestead improvements, and tax exemption was provided for settlers, but outside of that, revenue laws are almost the same. This is despite the participation of Governor Blaine in the controversy.

The legislature enacted a gasoline tax, but the governor vetoed it. He signed a bill providing a new graduated license fee based upon weight to replace the present $10 fee. Apportionment of funds is such under this bill that there will be a shortage, the highway department says.

Despite attempts to repeal and to amend, the Sevier prohibition enforcement statute remains unaffected by the legislature. Many expected changes in the search and seizure clause when the governor took a hand in

LIEUT. GOVERNOR COMINGS ANNOUNCES HIS CANDIDACY FOR WISCONSIN GOVERNOR

MADISON, Wis.—By the Associated Press.—Lieut. Governor George F. Comings Monday announced his candidacy for governor of Wisconsin at the primary election of 1924.

The lieutenant governor has for years been a leader among the La Follette progressive republicans and his announced candidacy represents the first break away from Governor J. J. Blaine, who is generally expected to seek re-election to a third term.

Following is the announcement made by Lieutenant Governor Comings: "I have decided to become a candidate for governor in the primary election of 1924. I have received such assurances of support from leading progressives that I believe it is my duty to make this announcement. I make the announcement this early in the hope that all the progressive forces of the state may unite on my candidacy."

PRISONER SHOTS SHERIFF AND MAKES ESCAPE FROM TRAIN

Poses Searching Through Eastern Dakota and Western Minnesota for Slayer

BRECKINRIDGE, Minn.—Two possees early Monday were searching for Edwin Rust, twenty, who is alleged to have shot and killed Sheriff L. C. Fulker of Brown county (Aberdeen), South Dakota, on a Great Northern train near Wolverton, Minn., and then made a sensational break for liberty.

One posse of twenty men is working south from Fargo, N. D. and the other, headed by Sheriff James Fitzgerald of Wilkin county, Minn., is going north.

Rust, said to be wanted in Aberdeen for burglary and robbery and to have a criminal record in California, was arrested last Friday at East Grand Forks, Minn. Sheriff Fulker was sent for him.

On the train Sunday night, en route to Aberdeen, Rust is alleged to have seized one of the sheriff's two guns and shot the officer and then escaping by leaping through a window of the moving train.

Shortly afterwards a man believed to be Rust held up a motorist on a highway paralleling the track, taking a hat and $1.10 in change.

The Brown county commissioners meeting at Aberdeen late last night, offered a $500 reward for capture of the slayer, dead or alive.

The body of Sheriff Fulker was brought to the Wilkin county morgue here.

CAMP YOUNG BEAR TO HAVE POW WOW NIGHT OF FOURTH

Father of Dan Young Bear to be Among those at the Camp
Fire Wednesday

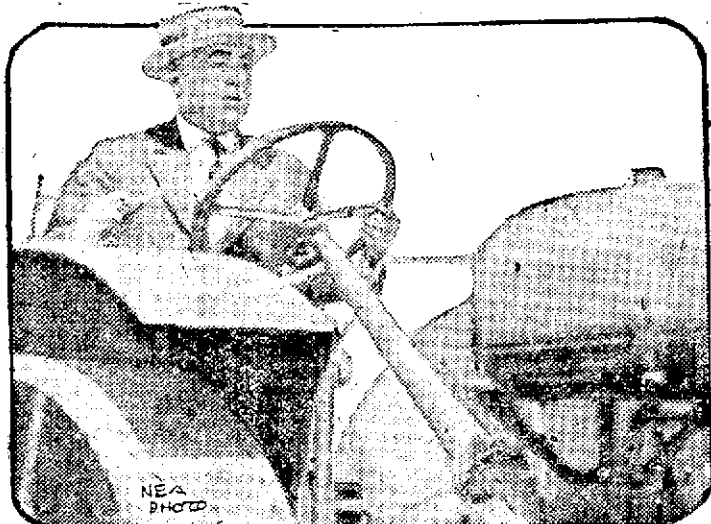

Camp Young Bear is to be honored on July 4 by a distinguished guest, Young Bear, the father of Dan Young Bear, a Musquakie Indian, who is a member of Camp Young Bear staff. Dan's father will arrive Wednesday morning, and will stay for several days. He is coming with all his tribal regalia, and will help Dan entertain the scouts Wednesday evening. The pow-wow will commence at sundown, and continue until finished, which will not be later than 9:30.

Many interesting things have happened in Camp Young Bear the past week. One of the most stupendous is the gaining in weight by the boys in camp. The boys consume more than a quart of milk a day, and many of the boys have gained from three to nine pounds. But if one could only see the appetite the boys have, and the amount of food they consume, which is served in enormous helpings by Miss Josephine Powers, head of the home economics department of the La Crosse vocational school, one would realize the possibility of this gain.

Still Building
Much construction work has been going on the last week in camp, and this week odds and ends will be finished, and regular dining service in the new dining hall will be inaugurated. On Thursday evening the boys will have a sing-song in front of the newly constructed fire-place in the dining hall, in place of the outside council fire. The outside dimensions of the fire-place are eight feet long and four feet wide, with a four foot open fire-place. The dining hall is 50x30 feet, with a kitchen 16x16 feet attached.

The membership at camp was restricted last week, and will be this week, because of the great amount of detail work necessary in putting the newly procured camp site in running condition. The camp site was purchased on June 22, the old dining hall at New Amsterdam donated by the mission was cut down and moved on the 23rd, and regular camp session began June 25, with twenty-five boys present, fifty-five boys being refused admittance, because of the inadequacy of the camp. It had been planned this week to take care of the full quota of 80 boys, but the rain caused delay in the work, making it possible to entertain only about forty boys. Next week, the full quota will be entertained, and continue until all the boys who wish to go to camp have been there. Any boy scout who wishes to come to camp for the Fourth of July may do so, and special effort will be made to entertain them. Visitors are welcome on the Fourth, but it will be necessary to ask them to refrain from driving on the reservation, parking all cars on the road, perpendicular to the fence.

The council fire Wednesday will be held at Little Bear camp. Scouts will be stationed on the road to direct visitors to the council ring.

TAX EXEMPTION ON HOMES TO RECEIVE BLAINE'S APPROVAL

Governor Indicates He Will Sign
Bill to Cut $500 from Assessed Valuation of Homes

MADISON, Wis.—Governor Blaine will sign a bill providing for an exemption from taxation for $500 on the assessed valuation of all home-stands in the state. This is the biggest tax measure to be passed at this session of the legislature and is intended to relieve small home owners of a part of the burden of taxes. The measure went through the senate by a close vote of 17 to 16 but found easier going in the house. While the bill will not reach Governor Blaine for several days, he has indicated his intentions of the signing of the measure.

Computations made by John Harrington of the state tax commission indicate that a home-stand exemption of $500 will mean a total reduction in valuation of general property of $172,500,000. At the assumed rate of tax at 2 percent this will mean a reduction on small home owners of the state of upwards of $2,000,000. The measure does not become effective until January 1, 1924 and will not disturb the tax levy made this year.

A Shirt Sleeved Organi- zation

THE world has no place for the shirk. This is the age of workers; of men who are able to do their part in performing the world's work, earnestly, efficiently, and with unbounded enthusiasm.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is an organization of 27,000 workers—a shirt sleeved organization—from the top to the bottom.

In this Company aristocracy is unknown. Instead there exists the true type of industrial democracy.

The department head and the employe work in full sympathy and understanding, shoulder to shoulder, for the common good. The office boy of today is the chief clerk of tomorrow; the district manager of today is the general manager of tomorrow.

On the Board of Directors of this Company is one man who started as a common laborer and truck driver; another who began as a mechanic's helper; two who started as office boys, and another who began as timekeeper—in fact, every man on the Board began in a comparatively humble capacity and earned his place by hard work and sheer ability.

There are thousands of men and boys in the ranks of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana)—encouraged and enthused by the inspiration of the "open road to the top"—who are fitting themselves for places on the Board of Directors.

It is this spirit of enthusiastic earnestness, in the mind and heart of every employe of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana), which enables this Company to render such superior service to the thirty million people of the Middle West.

It is this superior service that has made the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) one of the great industrial organizations of the world.

BE WISE not unwise, but understanding what the will of

Too Comfortable

ONE is glad to note that Mr. Trotsky thinks the revolution in the United States is a long way off. Not that there was much question here in the matter, but it is re-assuring to have such an expert as the head of the soviet government endorse one's opinion. And, it is to be presumed, the realistic Trotsky will deduce from his conclusion the inadvisability of wasting his efforts at revolution-nursing on such unfertile soil. And that is all to the good.

It is interesting to learn the reasons whereby this connoisseur of proletarian emotions arrives at his conclusion that the United States is revolutionarily hopeless for a long time to come. It seems that we have no proper proletariat that is down-trodden enough to consider it worthwhile to rise, and that we made such a good thing out of the war that we are all satisfied. This last may be questioned from the more intimate standpoint of an American, who knows that all we got out of the world war was defeat of Germany and a big debt. If anybody in the United States is satisfied with the result of the war we have not met him or heard about him. Against the importance of having broken up dangerous Junker ambitions we must offset uncomfortable taxes, high living costs and political complications inside and outside our borders, all of which make every American squirm and rail every time he thinks of them.

We think we are in a miserable mess. Mr. Trotsky's mournful admission that we are so abjectly comfortable as not to be worth a rebel's bother helps us to realize that in this world of comparatives we seem pretty happily situated.

Trotsky's statement, at this distance from the red paradise, seems sort of wistful and envious, don't you think?

Lame Argument

IF ONE is to assume that the Tribune's French and British correspondents, M. Tardieu and A. C. Gardiner, adequately stated the respective cases of their countries on Sunday in regard to the impending aerial armament race it would seem that the British have the better of the controversy. Armament competition, viewed abstractly, is of course foolish. But it takes at least two to make a bargain recognizing such foolishness, and if one country insists on a course of dangerous folly its neighbors cannot find security in abstract philosophy. Britain is vulnerable to continental attack by air, and the building up of a great air fleet within a few hours flight of her capital city by a nation increasingly more brusque and short in her dealings with British policy is a sufficient cause for defensive measures. In Britain's place we should do the same.

The French alarm does not seem sincere when it is realized that France is admitted to have by far the most potent aerial armament in the world. She has been working at its construction and improvement ever since the end of the war, lavishing huge subsidies on aircraft builders and commercial lines in order to insure facilities and trained personnel. Obviously this was a military measure, quite as obvious as the decision not to decrease the war-time term of conscription which maintained practically a war-strength military establishment for the French army. And it is equally patent that French political policy has been marching shoulder to shoulder with this urgent and anxious concentration of fighting strength. Paris today talks in international affairs with something very like arrogance. During and immediately after the war she took no steps without consultation with her allies, and was willing to consider their interests as well as jealous of her own. Now she frankly consults nothing but her own advantage. The relation of her military preponderance to this attitude is inescapable.

That the great French air-fleet, or other items of her military establishment, are merely defensive arrangements necessitated by the threatening strength of Germany is absurd. No doubt Germany would like to have avenge, and certainly she is not friendly toward France. But neither in the air nor on land is Germany ready to fight, nor can she be within a generation even were all her present troubles miraculously to be settled. Grant the French might have some reason to fear German air-power—though to grant it is to fly in the face of obvious facts. Even so Germany could not think of maintaining war against France. Aerial warfare is but one of the activities of modern war, and an auxiliary at that. Airplanes may harass troops, bombard cities and scare civilian populations. But despite all its developments it can't bring the ultimate decision. It has not yet supplanted artillery and infantry, and in the nature of things it cannot. A huge German air-fleet, more powerful than the French, might cause France great loss and trouble. But it could not defeat and destroy France unless there were a great German army, well equipped and provided with artillery and transport, to co-operate with it. Germany has no such army, and can't get it. And France holds the territory in which alone Germany could secure the vital materials for equipping and supporting such a force, holds it with a French army by far the largest and best equipped in the world.

It is true enough that the British air plans are conceived with an eye plainly upon the French plane strength. But to cry, as France is crying, that this is an aggressive act bound to rupture the entente is hypocritical. The entente is and has been in much greater danger from the obvious determination of France to secure the military hegemony of all Europe by creating a great superiority in all weapons and using them to back a dangerous policy at every occasion, and to the limit.

Blame the Fire-Lighter

BY JANE OSBORN

Marjorie Peters had hurried home from school that afternoon, for just as she was leaving her small apartment after lunch the parcel-post man had come with a package for her.

She had met him in the hall and had just time enough to hurry back up two flights of stairs with the package, unlock the door and slip it into the front hall. To have stopped long enough to see what the package contained would have meant tardiness at afternoon session.

So Marjorie changed her mind about keeping Bobbie Smith and Tommy Taylor in mind, and as soon as the children had filed out of the room at 3 o'clock she turned the key in her desk drawer and hurried out of the room, down the school corridor and off to her little apartment as fast as possible.

So she had a full half hour to open the package and examine its contents before Grace Baldwin—also school teacher—returned.

"It's a Cape Cod fire-lighter," Marjorie explained, holding up the little brass tray on which rested the brass tankard and torch. "You know you keep kerosene oil in here and keep the torch soaking and then when you want to light a log in your fireplace you don't need any paper or kindling just set the torch under the log, light the torch and let it burn. The heat from the flame starts the log burning."

"But it would be dangerous—having the kerosene standing about that way. I mean if there were any dogs or children about—they might upset it."

"But we haven't any dogs—or children," defended Marjorie.

"And we haven't any fireplace, either," replied Grace.

"No," sighed Marjorie, "but you see when I specified a Cape Cod fire-lighter I didn't know what high rents were asked for apartments with fireplaces. I'd hoped we could have one. You see it was last year when I was off at my aunt's summer place in Massachusetts, and we had a lot."

"I said I wouldn't be engaged by November of this year and she said I would—so we let an embroidered bureau cover to a Cape Cod fire-lighter and—"

"But it isn't the first of November," said Grace. "It's only the first of October. You've a whole month—"

Marjorie looked vexed. "Doesn't it amount to the same thing?" she demanded. "How in the world could I be engaged when there's no one to be engaged to, and you know yourself that people don't meet other people here in this city. So last week I wrote my aunt and told her I'd won the bet and she might as well pay up. Really it is lovely, isn't it?"

"Yes," agreed Grace rather slowly. "What can we use it for? If we took the torch out it would do rather nicely for maple syrup—that is, if children of us used maple syrup."

"Don't be absurd," warned Marjorie. "We're not going to use it at all until we can use it for a fire-lighter."

Hour to Marjorie seemed like some place where you could sit before an open fire. She saved the real estate sections of the Sunday papers and looked carefully through the advertisements of apartments for rent having open fireplaces. Usually she found that the rent for such apartments was at least twice what she and Grace were then paying.

Meantime the Cape Cod fire-lighter, untried, rested on top of Marjorie's bookcase. Thus two weeks passed. Then Marjorie saw an advertisement in a Sunday paper of "open fireplace apartments" in the very house where she and Grace lived.

So Marjorie visited the agent of the apartments, thinking that perhaps the rent of the apartment advertised would not be more expensive than she and Grace wished to pay. The agent was not encouraging.

"The rent for that apartment is $100 a month," he said—Marjorie and Grace paid $60. "The party that rents it is anxious to get out—and his lease expires the first of November. But we won't let it go for a dollar less than $100—sorry. We can get that much on account of the fireplace. Else if you like them, but I'd rather see in front of a radiator myself."

Marjorie knew the rent was prohibitive, but she felt curiously concerning the apartment. She figured out how long it would be with the present scale of salary increases for school teachers before she would be justified in such extravagance.

She asked the agent if she might look at the apartment and he referred her to the janitor, who had the key. The janitor told her that the "party" hadn't moved out yet, but that she could look at it. He—"the party"—didn't get home until 7 at night. The janitor himself was going away that afternoon. If she wished to look at the apartment that afternoon, no harm would be done and she might have the janitor's key.

Of course, said the janitor, that was a little unusual letting people have keys like that, especially as the apartment was still furnished—but still—Marjorie took the hint and gave the janitor a half dollar.

That afternoon the principal detained her at school, and over changes in programmes, and it was not until 5 that Marjorie reached the apartment. She went direct to the "open fireplace"—decidedly impatient. When she reached the door she felt like a thief—letting herself into some one's apartment unasked. The hall door creaked a little as she opened it and a little more as she closed it behind her. It was a little entrance hall with three doors leading to three rooms. She opened one—obviously a coat closet.

Another door opened into a room lined with books—a small room with a desk and a winged chair by a table. It was probably the third room that contained the open fireplace. Marjorie was about to close the door to proceed to the third door, when something—some one moved.

It was from behind the wings of that chair. A man rose, stretched himself drowsily and rubbed his eyes. Obviously it was the "party" who occupied the apartment.

Marjorie stammered something about keys and janitors and open fireplaces and Cape Cod fire-lighters, though she was sorry as soon as she had done so that she had mentioned the lighter.

"It's quite all right," said the man. "And I'm glad you woke me up. I'm not usually home in the daytime, but I brought some work home from the office, thinking I'd have a quiet place here—and I must have fallen to sleep. If you want to see the room with the fireplace, by all means have a look." The man went on, now wide awake, and ushering Marjorie into the next room.

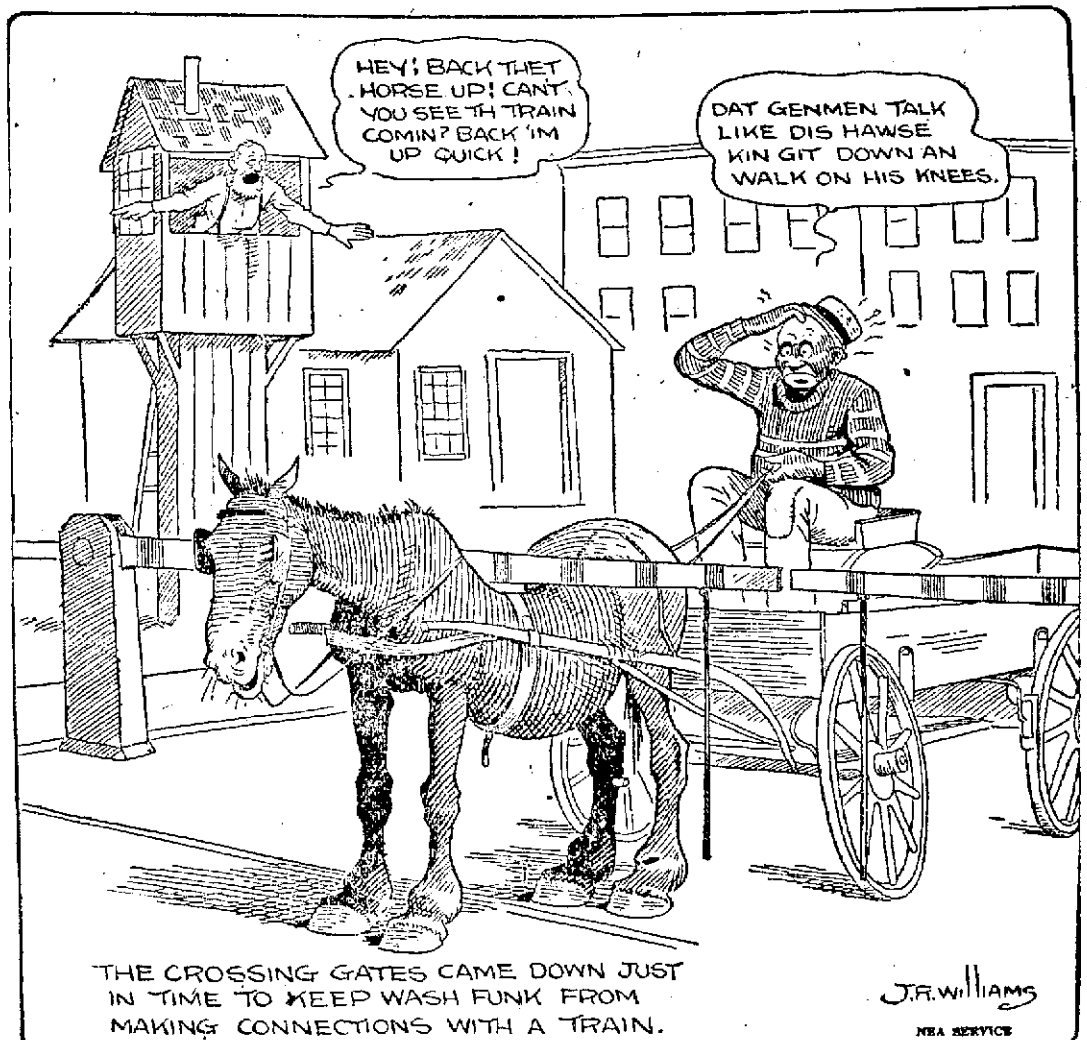

"What any one can do with a fireplace here in the city, I don't see. I've bought some wood, have it stored in one of the hall closets—but you can't start a fire with paper and logs, and there's no place to spit wood in an apartment. What do people do for kindlings—have to go out to the corner store and buy it, I suppose?"

"That's where a Cape Cod fire-lighter comes in," said Marjorie. And that was the real beginning of the romance. The man, Dawson Hill, noticed then as Marjorie looked up at him that she had just the kind of clear blue eyes that he had always admired.

He wanted to see her again, and here was a good chance. He asked whether he might borrow the fire-lighter, and before Marjorie had gone he had been arranged that she and Grace should bring the fire-lighter the first really chilly evening, and they'd try it. In the meantime they'd buy the kerosene, and in the meantime, too, Marjorie suggested that Mr. Hill come and call. It seemed only a courteous thing to suggest after having been so rude as to enter his apartment so unceremoniously.

Mr. Hill called the next night, and the following night it seemed so chilly that he rang the bell at Marjorie's

This all happened about the middle of October. Two weeks later, on the last day of the month, Marjorie's aunt received a package from her niece. It contained a Cape Cod fire-lighter, but not the one she had sent. A letter reached her the same day. "This is not the same fire-lighter," it explained, "because we want to keep that one as a memento. But I've lost my bet. The fire-lighter did it. His name is Dawson Hill." Swat the Fly Help La Crosse

This is the open season for flies. Wisconsin is trying to exterminate the pests. An appeal has been sent throughout the state for every one to join the ranks and fight the fly.

Innocent as they may seem, flies actually bring us untold suffering, unbearable loss, and exact an exceedingly heavy toll of human life," declares H. F. Wilson, entomologist at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture.

"Thousands of people die each year in Wisconsin of preventable diseases. All of us need to realize that flies play an important part in the production of these needless deaths," he says.

Destroy the Flies

"Swat them, trap them, poison them, kill them wherever you see them, but best of all, do away with their breeding places, and prevent them," urges Mr. Wilson.

"It has been found that one ounce (2 tablespoons) of formalin (40 percent formaldehyde) in 16 ounces (one pint) of a mixture of equal parts of milk and water in shallow dishes with a piece of bread in the center for the flies to light on, proves very attractive to the flies, especially when placed on the front and back porches of houses.

How to Prevent Flies

Without suitable places for hatching, flies cannot exist. Therefore, remove manure and wastes promptly.

1. Keep garbage in fly tight receptacles and have it removed at least twice a week.

2. In removing manure from the stables, if possible, put it directly on the wagon to haul to the fields. If daily hauling is impractical, spreading two or three times a week will do much to keep down the flies.

"When unable to do this, treat the manure to destroy the larvae. This can be done by treating with borax or insect powder. Both of these substances are effective and do not injure the fertilizing value of the manure.

About Fly Traps

"Although there are a number of fly traps on the market they are all built on about the same principle and except for size are as good as another. A simple trap comprising two telescoped cones set on a wooden base slightly raised and with a hole in the center can be made for home use at a cost of a few cents. The two cones should be nearly the same size at the base, but the outer cone should be higher than the inner. The inner cone should also have a small hole at its top to let the flies into the trap.

"A good fly trap may be made from two nail keg hoops and two pieces of wire screening. Small hooks hold the two cones together. The opening at the top of the inside cone is about the size of a lead pencil. Four nails are partly driven into the bottom to serve as legs to raise the trap from the floor. A saucer of some sweet substance, as sugar or syrup, is the bait."

JULY FOURTH TABLE HINTS

BY BERTHA E. SHAPLEIGH
Of Columbia University

The glorious Fourth of July will soon be here, and again the provider of food for the family is asking herself what she can serve that will carry out the day's meaning. Of course she might have a day of independence herself and give her family very simple meals. But with the numerous aids of crepe paper, favors, flags and candles, she can decorate her table beautifully and then serve food which will taste good.

Narrow red, white and blue ribbon may serve for tying together rolled wafers or cookies. Little flags flying from small cakes, or ice cream, and small rolls tied in red, white and blue paper like a fire cracker will all serve to entertain the younger members of the family, and some of the other ones!

Flowers help a great deal in table decoration. One of the prettiest combinations being red roses, "bachelor buttons" or corn flowers, and a soft white flower such as baby's breath, a bridal wreath or even "snow balls."

Another is to place inflowing holders, set in a shallow glass dish, tall sprays of larkspur or lupin, and around these red and white roses or peonies.

For the dinner on the Fourth, the following menu includes food in season, and would not be difficult to cook or serve.

Roasted Salmon, Egg Sauce

Cucumbers

Roast Lamb, Brown Gravy

Green Peas, New Potatoes

Ice Cream, Small Cakes, Coffee

The strawberries, about eight, should be served with the holls on around a little mound of powdered sugar. A plate is best for those.

Cucumbers are thinly sliced, dressed with oil and vinegar and passed with the salmon course.

Have a small flag flying from the ice cream, and the little cakes may be frosted with pink frosting made by mixing confectioner's sugar with fresh strawberry juice.

The dinner may be still more simple by serving either salmon or lamb as the main dish.

Rolls or bread are of course served.

Fourth of July Celebration For Y. W. Camp

The twenty-five children who are living at the Y. W. C. A. camp on Pettibone island this week are planning a Fourth of July celebration. This is the week for the youngest group. The camp is being devoted to children until July 10th. At present the camp quota is full but there will be some vacancies after Wednesday. Any children wishing to attend camp can make arrangements by phoning 3323-R.

A farewell party was given at the camp last week for Miss Audrey Shumway, who has gone to Milwaukee where she is to take training for children's nursing. The Happy Hearts attended the party.

A group of playground children under Miss Ann Turk had a swimming party and supper at the camp.

Friday evening the Girl Reserves who were having their week at camp had an entertainment. The Y. W. C. A. Syncopators' orchestra played. The girls were taught how to make frogs out of prunes, men out of gumdrops, and various other things. Prizes were given out for the best results.

HARDING APPROVES PLAN TO ADD TETON MOUNTAINS TO PARK

Two-day Visit in Yellowstone Makes President Advocate of Annexation Proposal

ON BOARD PRESIDENT HARDING'S SPECIAL TRAIN.—By The Associated Press.—Two days spent by President Harding in Yellowstone National Park has had the effect of making him a strong advocate of the proposal to add the Teton mountain region to the park area. Shortly before leaving the park late Sunday after having traveled through it and obtained a welcome surcease from the almost continuous train rides of the western trip, he indicated that not only would he approve legislation to add the mountains to the park, but that he would use his influence to bring about passage by congress of such an act. Both the president and Mrs. Harding had visited the park previously and each declared on boarding the train at Gardiner last night that Sunday and Saturday had been two of the most pleasant days of the trip. Also both of them appeared to have been refreshed.

The proposal to add to the park the Teton mountains, now embraced in Wyoming and covering about 1,600 square miles has been agitated for several years. Stockmen in Wyoming, however, have opposed the move. The Teton region now is reserved largely because of its being a refuge for elk. These animals are increasing and the stock men see the time when the area will be thrown open to them.

A bill to add the Teton region to the park was introduced in the last congress but not acted upon. The president's party spent most of today traveling across Montana and into Washington as Spokane is the next stop. There the president will make one of the principal speeches of his trip tonight, discussing reclamation hydro-electric power development and similar questions of interest to the northwest.

WEATHER AFFECTS BREAD CONSUMPTION

The daily weather report is one of the most important guides of the large bakeries of the country. For it has been discovered that consumption of bread depends largely on condition of the weather. If the day is hot and sultry bread eating always shows a decrease, while cool, crisp dry weather increases its consumption. One large bakery in Jersey City, N. J., has the daily weather forecast received by telephone, posted on a blackboard, and, according to the sales manager, this method saves the baking company as well as the retail stores loss from over-production and surplus buying.

SKELETON OF PREHISTORIC MONSTER FOUND IN CHINA
PEKING.—Practically a complete fossilized skeleton of a dinosaur has been discovered by members of the third Asiatic expedition sent out by the American Museum of Natural History under the leadership of Roy Chapman Andrews.

The expedition left Peking early in April for a point near Ekhlin, 270 miles beyond Kalgan on the Unga route, where last year's excavations gave promise of further valuable finds.

Working in what appears to have been a bend in a river-bed, the searchers found a skeleton at a depth of three feet.

In spite of the presence of numerous bones of other animals it has been possible to distinguish those of the huge creature. The ribs on the upper side are nearly all in place and a fossilized tail about ten feet in length is entirely complete. The work of excavating and covering the bones with preservatives has been going on for two weeks.

Word reaches Peking that the locality is rich in prospects and promises an entire summer's occupation.

JACK PICKFORD IN GREAT RACING FILM

Jack Pickford never made a better motion picture, and in fact, few photoplays have been so completely satisfying in so many respects as this star's picturization of "Garrison's Finish," which is coming today to the Rivoli Theater.

"Garrison's Finish" is one of those swift-moving racing stories such as are rarely written. It is replete with consuming excitement together with pleasing romance and compelling drama. Jack portrays the character of a heroic jockey and he acts and looks every inch the part. With the charming Madge Bellamy supporting him as a beautiful romantic foil he succeeds in doing some of the best histrionic work of his long, brilliant career.

Every feature of this film is par excellence. The photography is little short of marvelous, the scenes of the Kentucky Derby and the Metropolitan Handicap being particularly impressive.

GLIMPSE OF BACKSTAGE IN CHARLES JONES PICTURE

Imagine a strange man wandering backstage during the rehearsal of a musical comedy. The glimpses of the chorus, the making of the comedian, the unaccustomed lights, the loud voice of the stage manager.

as he orders the newcomer thrown from the theater. These are typical of the reception given to the leading character in "The Footlight Ranger," a Fox production starring Charles Jones at the Strand Theater, which begins a two day run tonight. The cast includes Fritz Brunette.

The story contains a great deal of comedy with a background of dramatic action and romantic adventure. The thread of human interest was carefully preserved.

Charles Jones' performance in his many past successes seems to point toward another screen achievement when "The Footlight Ranger" is shown.

CURIOUS COINS USED BY BRITISH PROTECTORATES

For years past nickel coins have been in use not only in the United States but also in Germany, Belgium, Italy, Switzerland, Egypt, Japan and Brazil. England mints all sorts of coins that the man in the street never handles, perhaps never sets eyes on. There is, for instance, the aluminum money which is used so much in Africa. There are two sorts, one a half cent, or farthing for use in Uganda, the other worth only a tenth of a penny, for circulation in the Nigerian Protectorates. Both the coins are perforated in the center so that the natives (who do not carry purses) may string them. In the first two years of their issue more than thirty-one millions of these coins were struck, and they have been a great success. The ten-a-penny aluminum is, however, not the smallest coin which bears the king's head. This record belongs to the Maltese "grango," which is worth only the twelfth part of a penny. Ceylon is perhaps the only British dependency which possesses a square coin. This is a five-cent note of nickel. It is square, but with rounded corners, and has its value marked in a large "5" on one side.

land, Denmark and Switzerland, represented by twenty competing firms. 1 French, 2 English, 1 Danish and 16 Swiss.

The results of the test will be made known in September at a public gathering to commemorate the centenary of A. L. Breguet, the famous Swiss clock-maker at Neuchatel.

Rev. Claude R. Shaver Utters Patriotic Thoughts Before the Fourth

"As we approach the national holiday of the coming week, and recall the changed meaning it has for most of our citizens today, as compared with the sires who inaugurated it, we are reminded of that warning of the wise man of long ago, who said: 'Remove not the ancient landmark, which the fathers have set.' Thus did Reverend Claude Shaver introduce a patriotic discourse at First Presbyterian church on Sunday morning. Continuing, he said in part: 'The landmarks of ancient, as well as modern, times have always been held most sacred, since they preserved orderly relations among men and sustained hallowed memories of past. They were both educational and disciplinary in their mission; hence were regarded as inviolate. In like manner, should we look upon these national holidays, set aside by our government as memorials to a particular national experience. They also are landmarks upon the plane of history and ought to be observed with something of original regard intended by our forefathers. While the great war brought back some of this significance to Memorial Day, it is rather a deplorable fact that Independence Day, and Thanksgiving, have lost much of their original suggestiveness and power. 'Then, there is the landmark of our Constitution, which the fathers intended as a bulwark of order and liberty. Even this is being undermined by some of the modern tendencies of legislation. As an example, we note the recent action of the governor and a certain element of the legislature of New York state, in their shameful attempt to discredit the 18th amendment. While that element does not represent the original or the noblest type of Americanism, it is evidently an insidious tendency and should be watched in every state. It is to the credit of our own legislature that the faint echo of that same anarchistic outburst in this commonwealth should be smothered before it could reach enactment. When we undermine the constitution, presumably to suit our own tastes and ambitions, we are at the same time, weakening the bulwarks of liberty and are lowering the standards of law. Even the landmark of the home is not as firmly planted as the past generations intended it to be. Home is not a house, but an institution of family unity. That its stability should be shaken because of the changing conditions of present day habits of life is easily explained. With our country homes and our city homes, our cottages and our camps, our Florida mansions and our Wisconsin residences, it is not easy to sustain the same sentiment towards the old homestead; which caused the fathers whose thoughts centered on one spot to 'strike for their altars and their fires.' We need not regret these signs of abundant prosperity in so far as they give variety and recreation to our people, unless these frequent and continuous changes obscure the sanctity of the home. But, is it not possible to find, in the idea of a family religion, a unifying power and a binding tie which will hold, in city flats as well as in fashionable summer hotels."

COUE DISOWNS LATEST FORMULA, "O HELL, I'M WELL"
PARIS.—The new formula attributed to me, "O hell, I'm well," is a canard and I beg you to deny it," Prof. Emile Coue telegraphed from Nancy Sunday. "I still use my old formula, every day in every way, etc., and I do not think it can be improved upon." In spite of Prof. Coue's disclaimer, the new formula has taken a popular fancy to Paris, and people on the street can be heard muttering it in every known language.

BADGER FARM-LABOR
DELEGATES TO PUSH
BOB FOR PRESIDENT

Conference to be Held in Chicago
Tuesday to Attempt Concerted Action on Presidency

MADISON, Wis.—Wisconsin progressives who are to represent Wisconsin at the Farmer-Labor conference in Chicago on July 3, will boost for the candidacy of Senator Robert M. La Follette for the nomination for the presidency. On Saturday night at a meeting in the office of Lieut. Gov. George F. Comings, the delegates adopted a resolution endorsing La Follette and declaring that in no event will they support President Harding for re-nomination. The delegates declared that the chief object in taking part in the meeting was to see if it was possible to get some united action in the presidential campaign or if independent political action is necessary. The resolution follows: "We, the Progressive delegates chosen to represent Wisconsin at the Farmer-Labor convention to be held in Chicago on July 3, send greetings of love and loyalty to Senator Robert M. La Follette, who for almost 40 years has been such an able and inspiring leader in the battle for human rights in this state, which has made the name 'Wisconsin' synonymous with progress. 'We congratulate him particularly on his steadfast opposition to the Esch-Cummins bill, and on his efforts to substitute government control of the railroads in place of railroad control of the government. 'We congratulate him also upon his successful opposition to the meat packers' monopoly, to the sales tax, to the ship subsidy, to the Kellogg bill, and for his searching investigation and valuable publicity regarding gasoline prices. 'We further congratulate him upon the notable increase in the number of progressives in congress which will make him the leader in the next congress of about 15 senators and 34 representatives. 'With the changing trend of public sentiment, Wisconsin progressives will rally stronger than ever in a determined effort to send a solid La Follette delegation to the next Republican convention. But if the powers of plutocracy triumph, and President Harding is re-nominated, we emphatically declare that we cannot support him for a second term and for this reason we are taking part in the Farmer-Labor convention, lending our support to a movement which at the present time seems to offer for next year the only refuge for self-respecting progressives. 'We call attention to the fact that in taking part in the Farmer-Labor convention at this time, a year before party platforms are adopted and party candidates nominated, our prime object is to see if a satisfactory basis for united action can be determined on, in case independent political action in the national field seems necessary in 1924."

AS MRS. AGNES REID

WINONA, Minn.—Identification of the body of a woman who jumped into the sea at Los Angeles on Feb. 21 last as that of Mrs. Agnes H. Reid, 71, daughter of the late Andrew Hamilton, former mayor of Winona, was made from a photograph of the dead woman this week, according to word received by Mrs. Hattie Liday of Winona, sister of Mrs. Reid and her only living relative. The body was identified from a photograph taken of it, after it had been held for two weeks in an effort to locate relatives, by Mrs. Cora B. Horton and Mrs. C. H. Osgood, both of Los Angeles, with whom Mrs. Reid had visited when she came there about Feb. 1. Mrs. Liday is satisfied that the identification is correct, she said, as both women were close friends of Mrs. Reid.

Tapered Shingles lie close and flat and offer greatest thickness where exposed to weather and possible fire.

Snuggles down to the roof because it's tapered

Because of their taper—an exclusive patented feature—WINTHROP SHINGLES lie close and weather proof. They will not rust, rot, break, split, nor blow away.

With but slight increase in the weight of a roof, they give 50% greater thickness where exposed to weather.

Asphalt is practically everlasting. Roads built of it stand up well under the heavy pounding of traffic and the attacks of weather. What better material could you select for your roof?

WINTHROPS have the attractive shape of the old wooden shingles with their pleasing shadow lines. They are surfaced with crushed slate of unfading colors—tile red, blue black, sea green. In solid colors or combinations you cannot fail to work the roof you desire.

Your lumber dealer either has or can get these shingles for you. You can tell them by their trade mark, WINTHROP, and the shape. There are none like them.
